

Using ESSA to Advocate to Meet the Needs of Your Students and/or School

Competency

Educator demonstrates an understanding of the needs of the students in their school and/or district and leverages the opportunities provided by the Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA) to meet those needs.

Key Method

The educator identifies one specific need of the students they serve and uses resources to develop a plan to advocate locally for that need to be met using the opportunities provided by ESSA.

Method Components

Effective educators continuously identify the needs of the schools and the students they serve. They further understand that when students' needs are identified and met, significant learning occurs, which in turn has a profound impact on students and their community. One way to identify these needs is through a survey sent to all stakeholders.

ESSA provides many opportunities for those identified needs to be met. Educators need to take advantage of these opportunities for their students' benefit. Some areas of need for students and schools an educator might find are:

- Over-testing
- Classroom size
- Teachers without certification or teaching out of their field
- Unsafe facilities

- Lack of school nurse
- Lack of school counselor
- Lack of librarian or media specialist
- Lack of technology
- Lack of ample classroom supplies
- Lack of community involvement
- Lack of parental involvement
- Lack of advanced courses/foreign language/career and technical training
- No preschool and/or full-day kindergarten
- A school climate that does not celebrate diversity
- A school climate that is not free of bullying and harassment
- Not enough paraeducators
- Not enough relevant, timely professional development
- No time for colleagues to collaborate
- Support for vulnerable student groups including: racial minorities, students with disabilities, and English learners.

This list in no way is to be considered complete. Educators may find a need for their students and school that is not on this list, and educators are encouraged to share that work with their colleagues.
